WOODEN PHOENIX

Any sword, rare (requires attunement)

This magic wooden sword is made with a special type of wood that grows only in volcanic regions where the lava veins flow like water beneath the ground. It looks like a regular wooden sword until its true nature is released. You have a +2 bonus to attack and damage rolls made with this magic weapon.

As a bonus action, you can expend a charge of this sword and speak its command word to make the magic sap within the wood ignite the blade for 1 minute. When you hit a creature with this magic sword while it is lit, the creature takes an extra 1d6 fire damage.

Phoenix Dance. In addition, the magic flames surrounding the sword turn even defensive movements, a threat to the enemies around you. Whenever a creature that is 5ft from you misses you with an attack roll, it takes 1d6 fire damage.

This magic sword has 3 charges and regains all its expended uses every day at dawn.
