LUPINS

HUMANOID CREATURES COVERED IN FUR WITH CANINE HEADS, the lupin dominate the steppes and forests where their nomadic packs roam. Their culture is built around honour, loyalty, and friendship, but woe be to those who cross them with deception or steel.

CONTESTED HISTORIES

The origin of the lupin race is a topic that not even the lupin themselves can be certain of. The oldest tales of lupin packs speak of a time where the lupin and werewolf races were one and the same, however, the lupin descend from lycanthropes who cast off the chaos of their monthly murderous sprees in order to become something more. A sophisticated race, fully in control of both body and mind. Other lupin scholars have more recently proposed a radical theory based on what little written history of the lupin people exists. This new theory suggests that the lupin race came from a union of humans and gnolls, and that early lupins became famed werewolf hunters in order to prove to their fearful human neighbours that they indeed were not werewolves. The objective truth may never be truly known as the vast majority of lupin culture is passed down orally, and therefore the question lingers still.

WEREWOLF HUNTERS

Lupins are experts in the field of hunting lycanthropes, specifically, werewolves. The act of hunting and killing werewolves has always been of great significance and bears a nearly spiritual significance amongst the lupin packs. Once a child reaches maturity, they are immediately taken into the fold of lupin hunters and taught the ways of hunting werewolves following an initiation rite known as the Moonset. Werewolves are seen as a mockery of lupin kind. The death and destruction they spread reflects poorly on lupin communities, as many other races often mistake lupins for werewolves from a distance. The murderous tendencies of werewolves also goes directly against the friendly and charitable outlook held by most lupin communities, and as such, werewolves are seen as abominations which must be destroyed.

NOMADIC PACKS

Lupins typically live in communities consisting of three to fifteen packs consisting of two to twelve individuals (and several pups). These communities practice strict egalitarian democracy and usually operate without an individual leader, though elders in the community can often sway the votes of younger members. Once per year, the overall community selects a representative from among the packs' elders as a spokesperson. This post is only ever held for one year and cannot be selected again until an elder from every other pack in the community has acted as spokesperson. Once per year, the selected spokesperson and any of the youths within the community who wish to go travel to a gathering of other lupin representatives from nearby communities called a White Howl. This White Howl acts as both a meeting for important discussion among the elders and as a chance for young lupins to find companions from outside the community in an effort to intertwine the overall lupin people with bonds of friendship, rivalry, and love. Once the important aspects of the Whit Howl have been attended to, it often turns into a three week long celebration.

THE ETERNAL FLAME

Each lupin community is liable to wander within their territory to a degree, however, they do construct villages composed of wooden longhouses typically built in a radial pattern surrounding a public space. In the centre of this space, the lupins maintain a continuous flame known as a bg'tyr. Even when the tribe moves from its village to wander for long periods of time, a single member of the community, usually an adolescent, always remains behind to tend the flame and ensure it doesn't go out. These individuals are referred to as flame keepers, and often grow up to prominence as one of the lupin communities' spiritual leaders.

AH'FLIR

The week of the full moon is an important and sacred time for lupins. During the three days when the moon is brightest, accomplished lupin werewolf hunters (called hruffs) from all the packs in a region gather together and form a temporary pack of their own called an ah'flir. These ah'flir packs have the specific purpose of hunting down and killing as many lycanthropes as possible, especially werewolves.

LUPIN

Not much is known to outsiders of the mysterious lupin people. Built like humans with the head of a dog, many creatures mistake lupins for gnolls or werewolves from a distance. A short coat of fur covers a lupin from head to toe, while longer silkie hair grows from the top of their heads. A lupin's body fur tends to be monochromatic, ranging from light grey through all the shades of brown, to black, with occasional variations.

LUPIN TRAITS

As a lupin, you have the following racial traits.

Ability Score Increase. When determining your character's ability scores, increase one score by 2 and increase a different score by 1, or increase three different scores by 1.

Creature Type. You are a Beast and a Humanoid.

Age. Lupins mature at about the same rate as humans, except that they reach adulthood in their early teens. They typically live to an age between 80 and 100 years.

Size. Lupins are roughly the same size as humans, but tend toward a sturdy build. Your size is Medium.

Speed. Your base walking speed is 30 feet.

Darkvision. You can see in dim light within 60 feet of you as if it were bright light, and in darkness as if it were dim light. You can't discern colour in darkness, only shades of grey.

Lupine Senses. Whenever you make an ability check that relies on hearing or smell, you are considered proficient with the skill. You have advantage on any ability check you make to track a creature or object.

Bite. Your jaws are a natural weapon that you can use to make melee weapon attacks. On a hit, your bite deals piercing damage equal to 1d6 + your Strength modifier.

Fierce Loyalty. When a creature you can see attacks a target other than you that is within 5 feet of you, you can use your reaction to make the attack target you instead.

Languages. You can speak, read, and write Common, Lupin, and one other language of your choice.
